The primary role of the veterinarian is to oversee all clinical care within the department, act as PetCure Oncology's lead clinician within the practice.

Specific responsibilities include:

- Providing the highest level of care and service to pet families and referring veterinarians
- Providing oversight, guidance and leadership for all members of the on-site clinical team
- Oversight of all consults, treatment plans, treatments and follow-up care for on-site patients
- Providing clinical support and coordinating care with all members of the referring DVM community, including both internal and external clinicians
- Providing video consults for out-of-market patients within local region
- Strict adherence to the clinical protocols established by the SAB as well as company-wide quality assurance standards
- A commitment to furthering the science of veterinary radiation therapy through data, research, treatment and collaboration
- Promotion of PetCure Oncology ideals and principles, which emphasize clinical research, exceptional service, a commitment to transparency, and industry-leading cancer care

Company Overview:

PetCure Oncology is a national veterinary cancer care provider that operates radiation oncology services within market-leading specialty animal hospitals around the country. Through these partnerships, we collaborate with specialists across services to offer pet owners and referring veterinarian's comprehensive cancer care. PetCure specializes in the delivery of veterinary radiation therapy, including stereotactic radiosurgery (SRS) delivered on Varian equipment with VMAT technology and on-board imaging. The Eclipse Treatment Planning System and Radialogical plan review software supports these treatments. All SRS patients are treated within the science-driven protocols established by our Scientific Advisory Board and its Clinical Protocol Committee.
